

Reflections on Seedfolks

by Andrew B

Amir the Brave One

I admire that Amir saw a person steal a woman's purse and then he ran after the person and caught him. I also admire that Amir used the garden to get to know people instead of just judging them by what other people say. The last thing I admire about Amir is that he thought it was nice to have a nice community. Those are the things I admire about Amir so back off and leave me alone! sorry-sorry.

Analyzing a Quote from Florence

"Then one day I passed it and someone was digging. It was a little Oriental girl, with a plastic bag of lima beans. I didn't recognize her. It didn't matter." (page 87)

It literally means that Florence passed the garden and she didn't know the person who was digging in it but it didn't matter because she was starting the garden again. What it means is that the garden is starting up again, and it is spring again. Kim is the person who started the whole garden by planting a lima bean. It matters because she was very happy that the garden was starting back up again and they would all get back together again and maybe even more people would come back. This whole thing is weird because Florence didn't even know the person who started the whole garden thing. (Ana).

Comparing and Contrasting Ana and Kim

One similarity between Ana and Kim is that they are both females. Another thing is they both grew up in the east of a continent. Ana and Kim have both lost a parent, Ana has lost her father and mother and Kim has lost her father. The differences between Ana and Kim is that Ana is old and lazy and Kim is young and frisky. One of the garden related things is that Kim planted the lima beans and Ana replanted the lima beans. Kim put more time into the garden like fixing the soil watering the plants and Ana just put the lima beans back in the ground.

