

Reflections on Seedfolks

Comparing and Contrasting Sam and Ana

Sam and Ana both try to make the world better because Sam smiles at everyone so they will get along and Ana tries to stop people from doing bad things. Sam planted something, but Ana didn't. They both participated in the garden. Sam is from America and Ana is from Romania. Both of them love the garden. Ana lives next to the garden and Sam lives a few blocks down the street.

Analyzing a Quote From Leona

"This wasn't a job for a wheel barrow, this was a job for the telephone." (p. 26)

Leona, who wanted to plant goldenrod in the lot, said this when she first saw the vacant lot with all the trash in it. She saw it on the way back from the grocery store as she saw Wendell cleaning a patch of land up near the front of the lot.

I think it means that she didn't want the trash there, but she couldn't clean it up herself with a wheel barrow. She decided she would need to call someone to get the city to clean it up because it was their responsibility.

One thing I can connect it to is the time I had a bunch of wood next to the house and my mom told me to bring it behind the house so I used the wheel barrow. It also connects to the time the big tree fell so my mom had to call some people to come clean it up because it was so big.

What I Admire About Sam

I admire how Sam tries as hard as he can to make the world better and get everyone to get along. He tried to make the whole world better when he was supporting the world government by raising money and other things. Then he retired and is now only working on one small part of Cleveland instead of the whole world. He said he thinks he has accomplished more in that small area than he did before. I think Sam is a very influential character in Seedfolks.
