

Reflections on Seedfolks

by Ella K

Analyzing a Quote From Kim

"An icy wind teetered trash cans and turned my cheeks to marble." (p.2)

I think that night, it was really cold and she didn't have the right clothes on. That sentence can be related to the rest of the paragraph. It describes the weather and how she is feeling at that moment and a comparison between the weather in Cleveland and in Vietnam.

This quote shows and explains how the weather is in Cleveland and in Vietnam.

That quote reminds me of when it is early spring and you are in shorts and a light jacket on and you are really cold. Some times it can feel like your cheeks feel hard because it is so cold.

I personally think the quote has a good description to it.

Comparing and Contrasting

Kim and Leona

Kim and Leona are different in some ways and similar in other ways. One of the reasons they are different is that Leona is older and is from the America and Kim is from Vietnam. Kim, I think has had a little more experience in gardening because she had a school project on planting beans in school and Leona had just started.

Some of the similarities that they share are that they both participate in the garden and listen to other people's opinions. They also both have had at least one person they knew who has passed away. Kim, whose father passed away and Leona's grandmother and her grandmothers doctors. They both also believed in the garden. They both can be really be similar and .can both be really different.

Qualities I admire in Kim

What I admire about Kim is that when she is sad or mad, she can do some thing to calm her self down. I like that the fact that she was the one who started the garden in the vacant lot. I also admire that she shows her bravery and can show her feelings. She is a caring person. I like how she puts the story in her own words. Kim, i personality think that she has a good personality and what she shows to the garden.

